Introduce the call

Hello, (name of contact), I am (your name), (job name) at (name of your company).

We've noticed that many people (emphasise on the main problem/need that your product solves).

So we've created to create a product/service that offers (briefly present the main benefits of your offer).

Is this a problem you are facing yourself?

If no: — Try to find the prospect's need: what are your current needs regarding this matter?

If yes: — Move on to the next questions.

Qualify the prospect and identify their needs

The following questions will help you qualify the prospect and better identify their needs, enabling you to use the right sales pitch.

BANT Questions

Budget — What budget do you typically allocate for this type of service/product?

Authority — Who makes the final purchase decisions?

Needs — What are your current priorities?

Timing — Are you looking to implement the solution now? Within what timeframe?

Book the meeting and prepare for closing

When the prospect matches your target and shows a real interest, it is the perfect time to present some brief data/advantages of your product that corresponds to their needs.

Thank you for taking the time to answer these questions. I understand that your main problem is (specify the identified issue).

I believe that our product/service could be of great help to you.

- It will allow you to...
- Thanks to it, you will be able to...
- X% of our clients have noticed that...

To experience these benefits first-hand, we suggest (point out a benefit of your offer such as a free trial). You can then choose between (mention the different offers and prices) the option that best suits your needs.

Would you be interested in this right now?

If not: — Would you be available on (date) for a further presentation of what our product/service can offer you?

If yes: — Could you please provide me with your email address so that I can send you all the necessary information?
